

PAC[®] | Proximity Token

Lightweight, ergonomic design with a choice of distinctive coloured clips

Overview

At PAC we have a policy of continual improvement of our products, so the release of a new token housing for our PAC/Easikey range of readers has incorporated several key improvements. The new tokens are easier to handle and have distinctive coloured clips to differentiate tokens; the clips are available in seven different colours. The new shape tokens are fully interchangeable with our existing token range.

As an alternative to the traditional door key, PAC's proximity ID tokens are used by millions of people as an easy and reliable means of gaining access to their homes, communal entrances, places of work and other secured access points such as carpark barriers and turnstiles.

PAC tokens can be programmed into any of PAC's residential or commercial access control systems so that the user's movement can be monitored and the building protected. The token need only be held near a PAC door reader for the code to be read (access will be granted or denied within 0.5 of a second). And of course, if a PAC token is lost or stolen, it is easily replaced. Lost tokens can be deleted from the access control system.
